23 abducted men found executed; no word on U.S. reporter

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Police on Sunday found the bullet-riddled bodies of nearly two dozen men abducted last week north of Baghdad after being rejected entry into a police academy, officials said.

Also on Sunday, insurgents fired rocket-propelled grenades at a policeman's home northeast of Baghdad, killing his four children and his brother and raising to at least 23 the number of Iraqis killed in attacks this weekend.

The violence continued as Iraq's political parties began gearing up for talks on a new coalition government that U.S. officials hope will win the confidence of disaffected Sunni Arabs and undermine support for the insurgency. That would hasten the time when U.S. and other foreign troops can go home.

There was still no word on the fate of kidnapped American journalist Jill Carroll two days after a deadline set by her captors. They had threatened to kill the 28-year-old free-lancer for The Christian Science Monitor unless all Iraqi women detainees were freed.

The bodies of the 23 men were found partially buried about 50 miles north of Baghdad, said Interior Ministry police

Lt. Thair Mahmoud. They had been abducted Wednesday while traveling from Baghdad to their homes in Samarra after failing to be accepted at a police recruit center. (AP)

If I Can't Learn to Drive, No One Will

A man was arrested Friday for scattering about 730 nails on a Chiba, Japan, driving-school course during the past month, the Mainichi Daily News reported. Shinichi Kato of Yachiyo was tested at the school three times last year to get a license to drive large vehicles — as required for his part-time job at a delivery company. After shutting down the course for about 30 minutes Dec. 13 by scattering about 120 nails on the course — as a way of venting his anger, police believe — he then sent a letter on Dec. 19 warning the center he would continue doing it. Police found Kato's fingerprints on the letter, officials said, leading to the arrest. (EXPRESS)

BUSKERS

Will Play Cash for Cash

Record companies who produce Johnny Cash albums are paying buskers in London's subway system $70 a day to sing songs by Cash as a way to promote sales as the movie "Walk the Line" appears in theaters this week, the (London) Times reported. Buskers must first pass an audition before getting paid for two-hour sets of Cash songs while dressed in black; the companies will give the buskers free Cash CDs so they can learn the material. Industry officials say the effort is already helping push Cash albums into sales charts there. "It is a good pay day for us. I like to play my own stuff most of the time, but the other day I left one two-hour pitch with just $3," said busker Andy Thornes. (EXPRESS)

Go Stretcher

Usually, in an emergency, an injured person is taken away in an ambulance or helicopter. But now, with this stretcher-on-skis contraption, EMTs could simply find a hill and give a shove to get the patient on their way. Or, more practically, kids such as Hunter Loveland and Kamren Anibas could just play on it, as they did Saturday, taking it for a ride while participating in a "furniture race" at the Bruce Mound Winter Sports Area in Merrillan, Wis. Toilet Me Out!

When a motorist nipped into a Lichtenau, Germany, highway rest stop's toilet Friday, he had no idea how cruel nature could be. The town has been experiencing cold weather and snow over the past few days, and the man found himself trapped in the toilet stall after the lock froze while he was inside. Unable to pry the door open, the man was stuck for an hour before another patron stopped at the restroom and called police. (AP)

Plant Closings, Cuts Loom at Ford

Automaker plans wide restructuring amid struggling SUV sales

DETROIT | Ford Motor Co., hurt by falling sales of sport utility vehicles, is expected to close plants and cut thousands of jobs in North America as part of a restructuring program to be announced Monday.

Ford has refused to release details of the plan, dubbed the "Way Forward," which also is expected to include product changes and cuts to Ford's salaried ranks. Ford has about 87,000 hourly workers and 35,000 salaried workers in North America.

The assembly plants believed to be most at risk for closure are in St. Louis; St. Paul, Minn.; Atlanta; Wixom, Mich.; St. Thomas, Both Washingtonian and Time magazines have reported the existence of about a half-dozen photos showing the two together.

Time reported on its Web site Sunday that its staff members have seen at least six photos featuring Bush and Abramoff, who has pleaded guilty to federal charges stemming from his lobbying practices and has pledged to cooperate with investigators. They appeared to have been taken at White House functions, according to the reports. Abramoff met with White House staff and attended Hanukkah recep-

Second W.Va. disaster spurs demand for industry overhauls

CHARLESTON, W.VA. | In death, 14 West Virginia coal miners have achieved something that just a month ago seemed an unlikely goal: Labor, industry and lawmakers are united in demanding that a dangerous occupation be made safer.

Hours after the bodies of two missing miners were found Saturday in Aracoma Coal's Alma No. 1 mine at Melville, Gov. Joe Manchin and West Virginia's congressional delegation called for a major overhaul of state and federal mine safety laws.

Both the National Mining Association and the United Mine Workers of America said Sunday that they, too, will press for change. The bodies of Don I. Bragg, 33, and

Halliburton Cited in Contamination

WASHINGTON | Troops and civilians at a U.S. military base in Iraq were exposed to contaminated water last year and employees for the responsible contractor, Halliburton, couldn't get their company to inform camp residents, according to interviews and internal company documents.

Halliburton, the company formerly headed by Vice President Dick Cheney, disputes the allegations about water problems at Camp Junction City in Ramadi, Iraq, even though they were made by its own employees and documented in company e-mails.

"We exposed a base camp population (military and civilian) to a water source that was not treated," said a July 15, 2005, memo written by William Granger, the official for Halliburton's KBR subsidiary who was in charge of water quality in Iraq and Kuwait.

"The level of contamination was roughly 2x the normal contamination of untreated water from the Euphrates River," Granger wrote.

Calif. Prisons Spark Probe

State officials link inmate "peacekeepers" with deadly incidents

SACRAMENTO, CALIF. | The California prison system's use of some of its toughest inmates to help keep order behind bars led to the slaying of a guard, investigators say. And the FBI is looking into whether the practice contributed to a second killing.

Although the practice is banned in some states, California's top corrections official defends the limited use of "peacekeepers." These influential inmates are entrusted to smooth racial tension and, in some cases, control fellow prisoners.

Critics worry that the freedom

VIOLENT PRISONS

These California facilities have the highest assault-incident rates in the state (per 100 inmates):

- State Prison, Sacramento: 12

- Salinas Valley State Prison, Soledad: 10.7
- Pelican Bay State Prison, Crescent City: 10.4
- Valley State Prison, Chowchilla: 9.4

accorded peacekeepers lets them commit crimes. Now the practice has come under scrutiny following two California slayings.

Last January, a peacekeeper stabbed a guard to death in Chino.

Weeks before, a peacekeeper at a Sacramento-area prison ordered an assault that ended with a guard killing an inmate, according to confidential reports.

With about 168,000 inmates, California's prison system is the nation's largest and has suffered several recent scandals. Some officers say inmates must have a role, though it can be a devil's bargain.

"Are inmates part of a fix? Absolutely," said Chuck Alexander, vice president of California's prison guards union. "But to send an inmate out as a quasi-United Nations representative? Who's controlling that? Who's running the damn place when you're using peacekeepers?" JEREMIAH MARQUEZ AND DON THOMPSON (AP)

Ex-Priest Faces New Charges

Admitted molester refutes accusations by alleged victims' brother

LOS ANGELES | Michael Wempe's attorney doesn't deny his client was a child molester in the 1970s and '80s, but he insists the once-revered priest never committed the alleged crime for which he is going on trial — molesting a boy in the 1990s.

Wempe

Wempe, 66, was once charged with molesting 13 boys in the 1970s and '80s, but the charges were dismissed after the U.S. Supreme Court in July 2003 struck down a state law that allowed retroactive prosecution of decades-old sex crimes charges involving children.

The accuser, now 20, is the brother of two boys whose cases were dismissed. He came forward with new allegations of molestation three months after the Supreme Court ruling. (AP)

He could have received the death penalty, but the jury rejected that sentence during two days of deliberations. Judge Peggy Foley Jones put off sentencing until Feb. 17.

Psychologists had testified that Halder is sane but delusional, and his attorneys argued that the 65-year-old's life should be spared because he is mentally ill. (AP)

Canadians Face Tough Call at Polls

Election of a new legislature could shift political landscape

OTTAWA | Canadians voting Monday for a new leader and House of Commons will choose between 13 years of Liberal Party rule or a new government that could shift the country toward a conservative right seeking to cut social programs funded by high taxes.

It's a tough call for the nation's 22.7 million registered voters.

Many support the social and economic policies of the Liberals and worry that Conservative leader Stephen Harper may be too extreme in his views on abortion and gay marriage, but Canadians also have grown weary of the broken promises and corruption scandals that have plagued the ruling party.

Pakistanis Still Fuming Over Attack

Sympathy grows for al Qaeda amid rallies against U.S. airstrike

DAMADOLA, PAKISTAN | Sympathy for al Qaeda has surged after a U.S. airstrike devastated this remote mountain hamlet in a region sometimes as hostile toward the Pakistani government as it is to the United States.

A week after the attack, villagers insist no members of the terror network were anywhere near the border village when it was hit. But thousands of protesters flooded a nearby town chanting, "Long live Osama bin Laden!"

The rally was the latest in a series of demonstrations across Pakistan against the Jan. 13

Pakistani intelligence officials believe that four top al Qaeda operatives may have also been killed in the strike including al Qaeda's master bomb-maker, Midhat Mursi.

The assault has caused friction between Islamabad and Washington and widespread outrage in this Islamic nation, but few are as angry as the people who live in the virtually lawless tribal region that borders Afghanistan.

USS Churchill chases down alleged rogue craft off Somali coast

DUBAI, UNITED ARAB EMIRATES | The U.S. Navy boarded an apparent pirate ship in the Indian Ocean and detained 26 men for questioning, the Navy said Sunday.

The 16 Indians and 10 Somali men were aboard a traditional dhow that was chased and seized Saturday by the U.S. guided-missile destroyer USS Winston S. Churchill, said Lt. Leslie Hull-Ryde of U.S. Naval Forces Central Command in Bahrain.

The dhow stopped fleeing after the Churchill twice fired warning shots during the chase, which ended 54 miles off the coast of Somalia, the Navy said.

The dhow's crew and passengers were being questioned Sunday aboard the Churchill to determine which were pirates and which were crew members, Hull-Ryde said.

Piracy is rampant off the coast of Somalia, which is torn by clashes between militias fighting over control of the African country. (AP)

U.N.: 20,000 Flee Volatile Congo for Refuge in Uganda

GENEVA | About 20,000 people have fled violence in eastern Congo to seek refuge in the border to Uganda over a four-day period, the U.N. refugee agency said Sunday.

Most of the refugees told the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees that they had fled to escape violence, while about 5,000 said they left Congo because they feared attack. UNHCR teams have already been sent to the Uganda-Congo border in response to the arrival of the refugees, who have been arriving since Thursday.

About 15,000 of them are staying at an airfield at Kisoro, 280 miles southwest of Kampala, while the remainder — many of whom brought their own food — are at a border hamlet, UNHCR said. (AP)

Morales Vows to Fight Oppression

Bolivia's first Indian president pledges big changes at inaugural

LA PAZ, BOLIVIA | Coca grower-turned-President Evo Morales vowed to end discrimination against Bolivia's Indian majority and lift this Andean nation's poor out of misery by tapping profits from abundant national gas reserves, as he was sworn into office on Sunday.

A fierce critic of U.S. policies who helped lead violent street uprisings that toppled two predecessors, Morales, 46, raised a clenched fist in a leftist salute to become Bolivia's first Indian president.

He defiantly declared his election marks the beginning of the end to hundreds of years of oppression against Bolivia's impoverished

MAN OF THE PEOPLE: Evo Morales greets an Indian woman as he leaves Congress in La Paz, Bolivia, on Sunday after being sworn in as the nation's new president.

Indian majority, recalling that just decades ago Indians had no place on segregated sidewalks.

"I wish to tell you, my Indian brothers, that the 500-year indigenous and popular campaign of resistance has not been in vain," Morales said.

The son of a poor peasant farmer, Morales vowed in his inaugural speech that his socialist government, now embarking on a five-year term, would reshape Bolivia, as he lashed out at free market economic prescriptions, calling them a failure in attempts to end poverty here.

"We've been discriminated against for 500 years, but now we have Evo and a government that will represent us," Aymara Indian Zenoino Perez said as he played a reed flute in celebration outside the inauguration. FIONA SMITH (AP)

AU Researcher Fights Deportation

After U.S. pressured China to release Gao, officials weigh her fate

ALEXANDRIA, VA. | Nearly five years ago, the U.S. government exerted high-profile diplomatic pressure on China to secure the return of scholar Gao Zhan, a researcher at American University whom Beijing believed was a spy for Taiwan.

Now the Department of Homeland Security is pushing with equal vigor to have her deported back to China, despite objections from the Department of Justice and a federal judge. A hearing is scheduled Monday in immigration court to determine whether Gao poses a risk to national security, as DHS contends.

Gao's case became international news in February 2001 when the American University researcher and her family were arrested by the Chinese. Her husband, Xue Donghua, and the couple's 5-year-old son were released after a month in custody.

Gao

But the Communist government charged Gao with espionage. The State Department protested and worked hard to secure her release. Sen. George Allen, R-Va., took up her cause and introduced legislation, which ultimately failed, to grant her U.S. citizenship in absentia.

The Chinese government put Gao on trial in July 2001, convicted her and sentenced her to prison. They decided to deport her to the United States rather than imprison her, and Gao received a hero's welcome when she returned to the U.S.

She spoke out frequently upon her return against human-rights abuses in China. A naturalization ceremony was scheduled for her, but abruptly canceled.

Then in 2003, Gao had pleaded guilty to illegally exporting more than $1 million in military-grade computer microprocessors to a Chinese government agency.

She struck a plea bargain that resulted in a seven-month jail sentence, plus eight months in a halfway house. Her jail time was severely reduced because prosecutors believed Gao had cooperated with their investigation and provided useful information to the United States. MATTHEW BARAKAT (AP)

Concerns Over Cost Lead To Delay for Horse Park

Gov. Robert Ehrlich has withheld a bill to finance a proposed state-run equestrian center in Anne Arundel County. His administration will back a resolution asking the county and the Maryland Stadium Authority to work out differences over funding. Ehrlich said the Republican governor strongly supports the horse park. But they said the bill had little chance of passing without the support of Anne Arundel County Executive Janet Owens, who has balked at the county's potential share of the estimated $100 million price tag. Cameras to Be Turned On for Abortion Rally

As activists converge on the Mall, police to monitor from afar

WASHINGTON | D.C.'s police are stepping up security Monday for what's expected to be the nation's largest abortion demonstration marking the 33rd anniversary of the Roe vs. Wade decision.

The Metropolitan Police Department announced Friday it would activate 19 surveillance cameras at 7 a.m. Monday to monitor for any suspicious activities throughout the day.

The cameras are posted at various locations along the National Mall and near the White House, the U.S. Capitol and in Georgetown.

Once the anti-abortion rights "March for Life" event and any counter-demonstrations conclude, the cameras will be deactivated, police said.

The cameras transmit pictures to the department's Joint Operations Command Center at police headquarters.

The cameras will also be used on Jan. 31 for President Bush's State of the Union address at the Capitol. (AP)

Rural Areas in Va. Lax on Recycling

RICHMOND, VA. | Rural areas lagged behind Virginia's urban areas in efforts to meet the state's mandatory recycling rate of 25 percent, a study found.

Data compiled by the state Department of Environmental Quality found that the Richmond area posted the highest recycling rate in 2004, at 44.6 percent; the Eastern Shore's Northampton County, at 1.6 percent, had the lowest rate.

The rates are estimates of how much paper, bottles, cans, used oil, concrete, tires, batteries, tree stumps, incinerator ash and other waste is collected and recycled in some way each year.

The statewide percentage has fallen for three years, reaching its lowest point in 2004 — 29.8 percent.

Since passing a mandatory recycling law in 1989, the state has never fined or taken an enforcement action against a county or city for failing to meet the 25 percent minimum. Each locality was supposed to reach the minimum by 1995. (AP)

Web sites for sharing amateur video clips swiftly gain devotees

TRENDS | Over the past year, Janelle Gunther occasionally captured video with her Canon PowerShot digital camera: An elephant parading through city streets to the Ringling Bros. circus, her friends on stage during an improv dance show.

But the clips simply sat on her computer unwatched — until last weekend, when she began adding them to Vimeo, one of several sites to emerge for sharing amateur footage.

There's no shortage of sites willing to accept such video, and once issues of revenues, copyright and ease of use get sorted out, the sharing of personal video promises to become as commonplace as photo-sharing is today.

"For the past six months or so, a lot of these sites have been popping up," said Jakob Lodwick, Vimeo's founder. "It went from being none to there being new ones every couple of weeks."

SHOOT TO SHARE: Steve Silvestri of Bates City, Mo., puts his travel footage on YouTube.com, a leading video sharing Web site.

Most digital cameras sold since 2004 can shoot video, and so can newer models of cellular phones, said Jill Aldort, an InfoTrends consultant who specializes in Internet imaging trends. CVS Corp. even sells disposable video cameras.

"People have video all over the place, coming out of their ears," said Cynthia Francis, chief executive of Reality Digital Inc., which runs the ClipShack sharing site. "People are looking for a way to share that."

Now they needn't necessarily burn DVDs or carry around cameras to show friends their latest video oeuvre. Thanks to faster Internet connections and better online video technology, even search engine leader Google Inc. is getting into the game.

YouTube.com, a leading site, had more than 3 million visitors in December, nearly tripling its visitation in November, according to Nielsen/NetRatings. YouTube Inc. says its users have been sharing 20,000 new videos a day and watching some 10 million daily.

Steve Silvestri, a local television news cameraman in Bates City, Mo., began sharing his library of personal videos on Christmas Eve, many featuring his travels on Amtrak. One clip got more than 10,000 views within two weeks.

"It's the greatest thing since the Internet," Silvestri said. "Everybody wants to have an audience for their stuff." ANICK JESDANUN (AP)

BACK TO THE FUTURE

- THIRTY-THREE percent of teens predicted that gasoline-powered cars will go the way of the horse and buggy by 2015.
- TWENTY-TWO percent of teenagers predicted desktop computers will become obsolete a decade from now.
- THE TEENS polled also said new inventions over any time frame can solve global problems like unclean water (91 percent) and hunger (89 percent). (AP)

Charging Up, Solar Style

TECH TEST | This is kind of depressing: I tested the Soldius1, a very cool new solar-powered battery charger for iPods and cell phones, only to find it tough to use in a New England winter.

That's because the Soldius1 seemed to need direct sunshine to function indoors.

The Soldius1 was great at doing its thing outdoors, even on a cloudy day. But I wasn't about to sit out in the cold to get that good light.

All that said, the Soldius1 ($90 directly from its Dutch maker at mysoldius.com) is a great idea. I could see it coming in very handy on car trips or camping excursions.

It comes with seven different plastic adapters that let it feed electrons into 250 different devices, including power-hungry iPods, Zen Micro MP3 players, BlackBerrys and mobile phones from Nokia,

The slim, solar-powered panels of the Soldius1 work to juice up an iPod.

Siemens, Sony Ericsson, Samsung and Motorola.

Here's a caveat. The compatibility sheet I was given with the Soldius1 said its panels would charge both new and older iPods. But while I used it to energize an iPod Mini and an iPod Nano, I got essentially zero results with a third-generation iPod.

The company says it has discovered that problem, too, and now no longer officially considers the Soldius1 compatible with any iPods other than the Mini, the Shuffle and the Nano. So tread carefully. BRIAN BERGSTEIN (AP)

Do You Continue to Be Depressed?

The NIMH is conducting a study to test the effectiveness of AMPAkine in major depression. This study examines a different mechanism of action from commonly used antidepressants. Our hope is to find new medications for individuals who have not responded to past treatment.

This is a 10-week outpatient and inpatient study of medication or placebo conducted at the NIH Clinical Center in Bethesda, Maryland.

Participants must:

- Be ages 21-55 • Be currently depressed
- Have taken an antidepressant that did not help

The study includes medical and psychiatric evaluations, and research medication at no cost. Transportation reimbursement provided.

Denver Coordinator Kubiak To Get Top Job in Houston

Denver coordinator Gary Kubiak will be hired as coach of the Houston Texans, bringing an offensive mind to a team that had the worst record in the NFL with a defensive coach at the helm this season. Texans owner Bob McNair said during a Sunday news conference that the hiring won't be completed until later in the week because the Texans could not negotiate a contract with Kubiak until the Broncos were eliminated from the playoffs. Denver lost Sunday to Pittsburgh, 34-17. (AP)

Barely a week after quitting as coach of the Bills, Mularkey agreed Sunday to become offensive coordinator of the Miami Dolphins. ROUND AND ROUND: The wheels on Jerome Bettis, aka "The Bus," are headed to his hometown, Detroit, for the Super Bowl in what might be the running back's last game.

Next Stop Super Bowl for Steelers

Pittsburgh continues to dazzle on the road in 34-17 win vs. Denver

AFC CHAMPIONSHIP | Big Ben, The Bus and all those Terrible Towels sure are traveling well this postseason. Next stop, the Super Bowl, the final destination of a Pittsburgh road trip the Denver Broncos were powerless to derail.

Ben Roethlisberger had a brilliant afternoon, throwing for 275 yards and two scores, and Jerome

Bettis extended his career one more game, lifting the Steelers to a dominating 34-17 victory in the AFC title game Sunday.

Bettis said, "We're going home!" as the game wore down and he celebrated on the sideline. He is, indeed, back to his hometown of Detroit for Pittsburgh's first appearance in the Super Bowl since 1995.

"I thought we could get there. It's come true," he said. "Detroit, watch out. Here we come!"

Outschemed, outplayed and pushed around all day, the Broncos (14-4) shuffled off to their locker room, heads down, after their first home loss in 10 tries this season.

"They had a great game plan," said Broncos coach Mike Shanahan, now 2-1 in AFC title games. "They played big on the road, very well-coached game, very well-played game."

Though Pittsburgh's next game, will be a homecoming for Bettis, the Steelers (14-5) have looked extremely comfortable on the road.

They became the first team to win three away games to make it to the Super Bowl since the 1985 New England Patriots. Some might look at that as a surprise. Anyone who has watched the Steelers over the past decade — and especially the last two months — certainly wouldn't.

"It feels great today, I'll tell you that," Steelers owner Dan Rooney said. "The coach already told me we're going to the Super Bowl to win it, not just to be there."

Plummer, Broncos Stumble at Home

Turnovers are costly as QB, team prepare for the long offseason

AFC CHAMPIONSHIP | No long flight home for the Denver Broncos this time. Just another long offseason.

Jake Plummer and the Broncos were left to ponder yet another blowout in the playoffs when they lost to underdog Pittsburgh 34-17 Sunday.

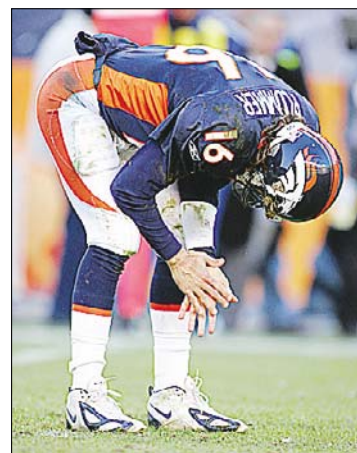

The last two years, the Broncos made early exits in the wild-card round at Indianapolis, where they were pummeled by a combined score of 90-34.

This time, it came at home and it came as a big surprise.

The Broncos had lost the ball four times at home all season, and Plummer threw just seven interceptions while shaking his image as a risky quarterback who lost his gambles more often than not.

Playing from behind, Plummer reverted to his old Arizona ways, turning the ball over on the ground twice and in the air twice, and Denver's two-headed running game was rendered useless by a three-TD halftime deficit.

Plummer's teammates had trouble holding onto the ball, too.

Champ Bailey, whose 100-yard interception return last week buried the Patriots, had the angle on an interception at midfield that would have given the Broncos momentum and a quick 7-0 lead.

But he mistimed his jump and Hines Ward cradled the high deflection in his arms at instead.

ARNIE STAPLETON (AP)

Jake Plummer reverted back to his days in Arizona during the loss on Sunday.

"It's disappointing when you feel like you've put in the work and there are no unanswered questions in my eyes as far as preparation," Roddick said. "You're kind of left searching a bit — that's an uneasy feeling."

Hoyas Feeling On Top of the World

Georgetown answers its critics with upset win over No. 1 Duke

HOYAS HOOPS | After losing each game they played against a ranked opponent this season, the Georgetown Hoyas needed to take down a top team to silence the doubters.

Why not the top team?

The Hoyas had been criticized for not being able to win the big games, but with an 87-84 win over previously undefeated Duke on Saturday, they came through in their biggest game — resulting in the first win over a No. 1 ranked team in 20 years.

The Hoyas (12-4) also were criticized for a few lackluster showings this season by the offense. But one game after a 50-point performance in a win over South Florida, Georgetown put out its best offensive output of the season — nine points higher than its previous best of 78 against Savannah State.

Senior Brandon Bowman's 23 points keyed the Hoyas win over Duke on Saturday.

Led by Brandon Bowman — 23 points solidified his place as the new center of the team's offense as previous top-scorer Roy Hibbert was held to just two points — the team showed what the consistency of that re-worked Princeton offense is capable of in the Georgetown system.

Coach John Thompson III said that the game revealed the best of what the offense can do — not what the team necessarily will do consistently. Yet.

"The big picture of the offense — I'm not sure," Thompson said after the sold-out game at MCI Center Saturday. "Are we better at it than we were last year? Yes. Are we a long way from where we want to be? Yes."

Either way, there's a lot to be optimistic about for Georgetown fans as the team re-enters the bulk of it's Big East competition this week.

"I like the way, as a group top to bottom, we were tough. We get through a stretch there where they were making a run, and we could have caved in, and we didn't," Thompson said. "Because they're going to make a run. Good teams are going to make runs. As a group, we were tough."

No. 25 GW Drops Game to UMass.

GW WOMEN | Kate Mills hit two free throws with 10 seconds left to give Massachusetts a 55-53 victory over No. 25 George Washington on Sunday.

UMass (5-13, 2-5 Atlantic 10) overcame a six-point deficit in the final four minutes for its first win against a ranked team since Dec. 12, 1999, when it beat No. 22 Stanford.

Mills finished with 13 points and 11 rebounds for UMass.

Kimberly Beck led the Colonials (12-5, 5-1) with 14 points. George Washington shot 34 percent from the field in the game. (AP)

Big 3 pours in 65 for Washington, but help is nowhere to be found

WIZARDS | Sixth man Mike Miller scored a season-high 30 points, and the Memphis Grizzlies withstood another big game from Washington's new Big Three, beating the Wizards 93-82 on Sunday to snap a four-game losing streak.

Miller almost single-handedly kept Memphis in the game for stretches, including a personal 9-0 run in the second quarter. At halftime, he had 19 points — two more than all of Memphis' starters combined.

Antawn Jamison, Gilbert Arenas and Caron Butler combined for 65 points for Washington. Jamison led the way with 25 points and 10 rebounds for his fourth-straight 20-10 game, and Arenas scored 24.

five of six games, the trio didn't get much support Sunday in front of a crowd of 14,914. The Wizards' other two starters, Brendan Haywood and Jared Jeffries, combined for seven points on 2-for-9 shooting.

Memphis' leading scorer, forward Pau Gasol, was in foul trouble most of the game and was limited to 13 points and four rebounds in 27 minutes.

That was OK, though, because of Miller and some solid defense from a Grizzlies club that entered the game allowing opponents only 86.9 points per game, the NBA's lowest average.

Memphis limited Washington to 39 percent from the floor and overcame its own propensity for poor shooting. The Grizzlies scored an average of under 82 points during their four-game slide and they were below 40 percent from the field much of the game before finishing at 43. HOWARD FENDRICH (AP)

Carmelo Anthony scores past Tim Duncan in Denver's 89-85 win Sunday.

No Small Win for the Nuggets

NBA | Denver's littlest man came up big when it counted Sunday, while San Antonio's biggest provided little help for his team.

Earl Boykins, all 5-foot-5 of him, scored nine of his 19 points in the fourth quarter, and the Nuggets held Tim Duncan to one basket in the second half in their 89-85 victory over the Spurs.

The Nuggets trailed by one after three quarters, but took the lead at 69-68 with 10:44 left when Boykins made a short jumper after a steal by Greg Buckner. It was the first of six turnovers in the period for the Spurs, matching their number of field goals.

San Antonio committed 17 turnovers, 12 in the second half. Duncan had a team-high six turnovers and only four field goals in the game. (AP)

Army Ends Skid By Topping Navy

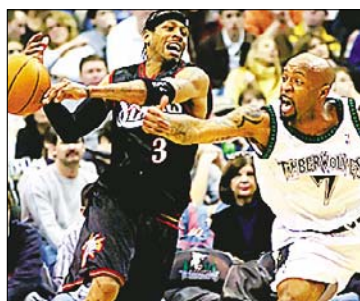

COLLEGE HOOPS | Matt Bell scored 24 points and Corban Bates added a career-high 20 to lead Army to an 80-73 victory over Navy on Sunday. The win snapped a seven-game losing streak for the Black Knights (5-12, 1-4 Patriot League). It was Army's second win in Annapolis in 3 years, following 14 straight road losses to Navy (7-10, 0-4). (AP)

Iverson Keeps His Word to the 76ers

NBA | With the Philadelphia 76ers trailing by 19 points late in the third quarter, Allen Iverson made a promise to his teammates during a timeout.

"I promised them that if we got it under 10, we'd win the game," he said.

Iverson kept his word when Andre Iguodala's follow of Chris Webber's missed layup narrowly beat the buzzer, lifting the 76ers over the Minnesota Timberwolves 86-84 on Sunday. "It was one I'll never forget," Iverson said.

The Timberwolves won't forget Iverson anytime soon. He scored 39 points for the 76ers, who overcame a poor shooting performance to win their second straight and sweep the season series against the Wolves.

Iguodala had 14 points and Webber finished with 11. Webber was only 4-for-16 shooting, but helped hold Kevin Garnett to 13 points — nine below his average. (AP)

Disciplining a Classic

Emma Thompson rolls up her sleeves for 'Nanny McPhee'

DOMESTIC HELP | Based on the "Nurse Matilda" books by the late author Christianna Brand, "Nanny McPhee" is a cross between Mary Poppins and Willy Wonka. McPhee isn't very demonstrative, but she gets the job done with a little magic.

British actress Emma Thompson is almost unrecognizable as Nanny in the film that opens here on Friday. She's saddled with a heavily padded costume, a bulbous nose, protruding warts, a unibrow and a snaggletooth.

The film marks her first credited screenwriting venture since 1995's Oscar-winning "Sense and Sensibility," in which she also starred.

Bringing "Nanny McPhee" to the big screen was a labor of love that took nearly a decade. Thompson rediscovered the long-out-of-print books she had read as a child. The books depict the magical adventures of a mysterious nanny who arrives on the doorstep of a house filled with unruly children.

Thompson says her screenplay was influenced by the popular nanny films of her youth — "Mary Poppins" and "The Sound of Music"

MARY POPPINS DARK: Thompson was inspired by the darker comic edge in the original "Nurse Matilda" children's books.

— yet "Nanny McPhee" has a darker comical edge. Arriving at the Brown residence shortly after the 17th nanny has been driven away by the household's mischievous children, McPhee sets about restoring order. Her unexpected arrival confuses Mr. Brown (Colin Firth), but he welcomes her nonetheless because he has exhausted the supply of available local nannies.

Nonplussed by the children's antics, Nanny McPhee sets out to impart important lessons to the children, using a little magic via her ever-present walking stick.

Thompson said the children were great, but the pet donkey was a headache. She joked, "You know that advisory at the end of movies where it says 'No animal was harmed accidentally or otherwise?' Well, I wanted to harm it. I wanted to have at the end of the film, Emma Thompson harmed this animal."

The "Nanny McPhee" script contains some expressions that smaller children may not recognize, but Thompson is confident they will understand the meaning.

"I like that [the script] is honest and not trying to be hip," co-star Firth said. "It allows itself to have a kind of cozy ... feeling of old nursery parlor fairy tales. And there's a very archetypal dark streak running throughout the story." ANGELA DAWSON (VNU ENTERTAINMENT NEWS WIRE)

NBC imposes term limits on 'The West Wing,' ending in May

A NEW ADMINISTRATION | The new president on "The West Wing" will be a real short-timer: NBC announced Sunday it was pulling the plug on the Emmy-winning political drama after seven seasons in May.

NBC, struggling to regain its footing after the worst season in its history, also outlined several mid-season schedule changes — including the moves of popular dramas "Law & Order" and "Las Vegas."

"The West Wing" announcement wasn't much of a surprise. Although this season's story line with a presidential campaign involving a Democrat played by Jimmy Smits and Republican portrayed by Alan Alda has been strong critically, ratings have sunk with its move to Sunday nights.

The decision to cancel it was made before actor John Spencer, who played former presidential chief of staff Leo McGarry, died of a heart attack Dec. 16, said Kevin Reilly, NBC entertainment president.

"There's a point when you look at the ratings and say, it feels like it's time," Reilly said.

The series finale will be May 14, preceded by a one-hour retrospective. The campaign to replace the fictional Josiah Bartlet as president will be settled, NBC said.

Producers Aaron Sorkin and Thomas Schlamme, who created the show and guided it through its early years, will not be involved in the finale, Reilly said.

NBC defies time with massive coverage of the Winter Olympics

UBIQUITY | There aren't enough hours in the day to watch all the Winter Olympics coverage that NBC and its cable partners are serving up.

Even if you want to watch someone hurtling headfirst down a mountain or find out what the biathlon is, you won't see it all live. NBC's planned 416 hours of coverage (including broadcast network and cable outlets) averages out to

GLUED TO THE SCREEN: Expect to see a lot of the Cesana Pariol track this February.

24.5 hours a day.

"We are reinventing the clock," said David Neal, executive producer of NBC Sports.

The Turin, Italy Winter Games open Feb. 10 and continue for 16 days after that. NBC executives are privately trying to downplay ratings expectations, given that Olympics on U.S. snow and ice tend to draw more interest. But they're hoping a strong United States team will spike the TV turnout.

For the winter Olympics to really take off for NBC, it requires some kind of story, some personalities that intrigue viewers. American skier Bode Miller, for example, introduced himself to the world away from snow-covered mountains with a "60 Minutes" interview admitting he has skied after drinking.

"I'm waiting for my thank-you card from my good friend [NBC sports boss] Dick Ebersol," joked CBS News and Sports President Sean McManus.

NBC's prime-time coverage will feature high-profile sports like figure skating, skiing and snowboarding. And, because Turin is six hours ahead of Eastern Standard Time, those competitions will be taped.

For the first time in the Winter Games, every session of every sport will have at least some coverage, Neal said.

That includes, for die-hards, a numbing 26 curling matches — 15 of them shown live. DAVID BAUDER (AP)

Careers

Fine Art Appraiser

GRETCHEN WOLF, 36

JOB: Independent fine art appraiser

SALARY: $125 dollars an hour, or on commission

EDUCATION: Bachelor's in history with a minor in art history from James Madison University, plus an appraisal studies credentialing program at George Washington University (that program is no longer offered, however)

WHAT SHE DOES: Wolf uses her well-trained eye to price privately owned 19th- and 20th-century artworks. But why would someone assign a dollar amount to Auntie Edna's beloved Victorian dog portrait? There are three reasons: "One would be insurance," said Wolf. "In this case, I would generally be hired by a private individual who wanted to list something on their insurance policy." She also does appraisals for businesses making charitable donations and people who need to pay estate taxes on recently inherited works; these reports are reviewed by the IRS. And she sometimes helps divide property and estates.

Appraising by itself, however, doesn't start paying the bills until years down the road. Junior appraisers like Wolf often help clients find private buyers or auction houses where the sellers will have the best shot at getting top dollar for their works. Wolf would be paid a percentage of the selling price by her client, and usually a bit from the auction house.

WOULD YOU WANT HER JOB? There's far more research that goes into appraisals than "Antiques Roadshow" suggests. Appraisers spend much of their time contacting private dealers and using online auction databases to stay abreast of the going rates in their specialty areas. There can also be a lot at stake: Appraisers must make sure they're as accurate as possible, especially when making reports that will be reviewed by the IRS. If a report is contested, the appraiser can be held liable.

HOW CAN YOU GET HER JOB: Working in an auction house or gallery is a good place to start, especially one that carries art from the time period or genre you'd like to specialize in. Taking courses in appraisal studies is also suggested; the first two Web sites below offer details on courses. Since the field is mostly unregulated, joining a professional organization such as the American Society of Appraisers can help you make contacts and follow appraisal guidelines.

FOR MORE INFORMATION: The American Society of Appraisers (appraisers.org), Appraisers Association of America (appraisersassoc.org), Sloans and Kenyon Auctioneers and Appraisers (sloansandkenyon.com), Weschler's Auctioneers and Appraisers (weschlers.com). SARA ATWATER

LIVE ONLINE

Life at Work

AMY JOYCE's column appears Sundays in The Washington Post. She chats every Tuesday at 11 a.m. on washingtonpost.com/liveonline.

I'm very dependable and hard-working. People take advantage of this, and I let them. In addition to doing more during the day, I'm often asked to work evenings and weekends because I don't have family obligations. How can I develop more backbone?

By saying no. "I've been working lots of weekends and have to deal with other things this weekend." "I'm sorry, I have an obligation this evening and can't work late." "I'm already working on X. I don't think I can do what you're asking unless I blew off my other work."

SALES MANAGEMENT/Sales Supervisor

ASSOCIATE SALES MANAGER

Join the management team of The Washington Post!

The Washington Post, one of the nation's premier media companies, is seeking a highly motivated sales professional to drive the success of its Jobs advertising sales department. This is an opportunity to set your people management, analytical, entrepreneurial, sales coaching and training skills simultaneously into motion. The ideal candidate should have strong customer-focused, relationship building skills, an ability to see the 'big picture,' a career-driven attitude, a proactive approach to problem-solving and a solid track record of sales achievement. This is an ideal position for an individual who is able to innovate and implement change, has strong analytical skills and strong people management skills.

You will be responsible for:

- The day-to-day operations of the Jobs Advertising Call Center
- Managing the performance of a team of telephone sales representatives and sales associates
- Coaching and motivating the sales agents by creating a sales-oriented and customer-oriented culture within the department
- Driving the revenue performance of the department
- Proactively looking for new sales opportunities
- Proactively looking for process improvement opportunities

Three or more years of sales and/or sales management experience is necessary. Call center experience greatly preferred.

The Washington Post isn't just a great newspaper: It's also a great place to work with interesting jobs, competitive benefits, a diverse workforce and a long tradition of community service. When you join The Post, you join a company of more than 3,000 employees who are proud to work here.

For confidential consideration, please fax/mail/email your resume and cover letter to:

Jews looking for new ideas to keep young followers interested

Every time Rabbi Dov Gartenberg led the Sabbath service at Congregation Beth Shalom in Simi Valley, Calif., he would see bored faces among the worshippers and wonder how long he could hold their interest.

"I could say, 'That person's going to leave in 30 minutes and that person's going to leave in 45 minutes.' And I was right," he said. "I was powerless to stop it."

Frustrated, Gartenberg quit his congregation two years ago and opened a nonprofit for Jews who feel most synagogues have forsaken them.

Last week, Gartenberg took another unusual step: He and other Jewish leaders met with evangelical Christians who set out on a similar path a decade ago and sparked a mini-revolution in the process.

Over two days, representatives from nearly 30 emergent Jewish and Christian worship groups talked about abandoning traditional worship in search of a more personal connection with God that they said they can't find in temple or church. They also shared their vision with more traditional Jewish leaders who hope this new "emergent Judaism" might help bring young Jews back at least to some style of worship.

"We've got to learn from what our Christian colleagues are doing," said Shawn Landres, a rabbi with Synagogue 3000, a progressive Jewish think tank that set up the meeting at the Brandeis-Bardin Institute.

"We told them, 'You guys are maybe five to 10 years ahead of us, and we want to know what you did right and what you did wrong,'" she said.

Speakers at the conference said both faiths are struggling to stay relevant — particularly to young people — in a culture that is increasingly fast-paced and global.

Admonishments to believe in God and attend services regularly aren't enough to help people make sense of today's world, said Wade Clark Roof,

DOV GARTENBERG

a religion professor at University of California, Santa Barbara.

"There's a very general sense of wanting to find ways to embody faith — to live it," said Roof. "There's a very deep quest within the culture for that and you find it broadly based."

Some American Jews such as Gartenberg have founded organizations that host online blogs and podcasts and offer Sabbath feasts in members' dining rooms.

This "gets a rabbi into people's homes, which is completely novel," said Gartenberg. GILLIAN FLACCUS (AP)

Nordic walking soups up strolls using ski gear sans the snow

Markku Mustonen typically gets the same response when he walks with ski poles up the grassy hills leading to the top of Stone Mountain in Stone Mountain, Ga.: "Hey buddy, looking for snow?"

But to the Finnish native, it's not about the snow, especially in a place that had its last major snowfall — 2 ½ inches — nearly two years ago.

It's about the ski poles, which Mustonen and others say add intensity to walking workouts and are a great tool for becoming fit.

Taking a page from his Nordic countrymen, Mustonen is trying to get others in the United States interested in the European practice of skiwalking, also known as Nordic walking.

"Slowly people are getting involved with it," said Mustonen, president of Skiwalk, which organizes a walking group and sells ski poles. "The reaction basically is, 'Who is this crazy person?' But once you explain it to them, then they say, 'Oh, really? That makes sense.'"

The poles used by ski walkers are similar to those found on ski slopes: They are made of aluminum, fiberglass or ultralight carbon fiber. Skiwalking poles, however, typically have rubber tips so walkers can use them on hard surfaces such as streets or sidewalks. Some skiwalking poles telescope so they can be easily taken on trips.

The poles, which help walkers propel themselves forward, help develop arm and shoulder muscles and get the heart pumping. A 2002 study by the Cooper Institute, a research organization that focuses on exercise, found that people who walk with the poles burn 20 percent more calories than those who don't.

The International Nordic Walking Association estimates that more than 3.5 million people do it worldwide. Finnish kindergartners use ski poles in their schools' physical "Anywhere you live, you can enjoy this," said fitness instructor Malin Svensson, a native of Sweden who leads Nordic walking classes in Santa Monica, Calif., where she discovered she could easily ramp up her workouts by using the poles on the beach.

Return to Elegance

Next winter, even blue jeans will boast smooth silhouettes

It was only a matter of time before Italian menswear would switch from rags to riches. After many a season of casual styles, designers in last week's fashion shows traded slouchy jeans for swanky suits and decreed a return to elegant dressing for the fall-winter 2006-2007.

The new Armani collection is almost all velvet, from the Chinese shirts to the "tweed jacket" and pinstriped trousers, to the emerald green vest. The overall look is smooth and easy, but never casual.

Themes and historic periods also defined the shows, from the imperial military elegance of the gold-embroidered and brass-buttoned uniforms at Dolce&Gabbana to the Don Giovanni dandy at Roberto Cavalli. Fun-loving Moschino paraded a circus of characters to illustrate its new fashions, including the waiter in bow tie and vest, the gangster in pinstriped suit, the priest in gray cashmere and the detective wearing the latest Moschino trench coat.

For his Wednesday show, Valentino turned the catwalk into a VIP airport lounge for exquisitely outfitted globe trotters: a rock star in shimmering T-shirt, an aging actress in black coat and matching turban, two gay cowboys in jeans and leather jackets.

Fendi opted for a film presentation. Entitled "The Golden Mirror," the brief movie stars French actor Malik Zid, who plays the part of a painter turned vampire to satisfy his craving for clothes. Since he dresses in Fendi, his coveted wardrobe includes coats in incredibly worked fur as light as wool, knitwear which blends cashmere and fur and a brand new luggage line in sturdy nylon and leather dubbed "Fendi Stables."

In general the elegant winter look calls for a more defined silhouette. Trousers tend to be narrow, while jackets are relatively short and cut close to the body, but with wide shoulders. Jeans are so clean-cut they are almost prissy.

MILAN
REPORT

Versace showed a deep, inky blue, top left. Roberto Cavalli brought a bit of the swashbuckler to the runway, lower left. Valentino turned his show into a lounge for globetrotters, including this smooth operator in head-to-toe camel and a wild rollicking suitcase, right.

There is less knitwear than in past seasons, with the shirt making a big comeback — at times in a frilly dandy version. Ties as usual are optional, with many designers preferring a fancy shirt collar. The sophisticated Bottega Veneta collection championed the return of the bow tie, while kerchiefs showed up at other shows.

Outerwear comes in large overcoats, often of military ancestry, or short sport jackets in shiny fabric. Men next winter will walk in either sturdy cavalry boots, or lace-ups often gentrified with patent-leather or reptile tips. Not to worry, running shoes are still current, especially if ennobled with embroidery. DANIELA PETROFF (AP)

Beauty

Turnaround Time

Dryness isn't the only winter indignity suffered by our epidermises. Skin often begins to look dull and boring — it just loses life. Harsh exfoliants, though, only make skin red and painful. To the rescue comes CLINIQUE'S TURNAROUND, a set of two products. The Visible Skin Renewer ($37, Clinique counters) is made for daily application; the 15-minute Facial ($35) should be used once or twice a week. Consistent use of the Skin Renewer improved skin's appearance in about two weeks; however, the results after using Facial were instant. Skin was immediately smoother and healthier-looking. The best part was that there was no harshness, no stinging and no redness — a true winter wonder. KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

Old Chicks Are Hot

The word "icon" is tossed around a bit too easily. It's hard to justify calling a starlet who's not even a full-fledged adult an icon, but that's how many glossies, red-carpet watchers and designers describe the Sienna Miller-Scarlett Johansson set. Not MAC, though. The company saves the word for seasoned stars who've shown they can set trends at any age — such as CATHERINE DENEUE, the third MAC beauty icon. "I felt very proud to be chosen," she said. "I really did collaborate on the product, colors, the style of the powder cases. It was really fun." The limited edition Icon collection consists of two eyeshadow palettes ($35) and three lip colors ($14-$17, maccosmetics.com). (AP)

Wilson Pickett

ANTHONY DECURTIS, contributing editor at "Rolling Stone," was online Friday to discuss the life of soul music legend Wilson Pickett. | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

Wilson Pickett. The man was wild. Nobody could scream like him. He's been absent from the hit charts for many years now but, for today's music audience, how would you describe Pickett and his place in pop music history?

Pickett represented the hardest, most untamed edge of Sixties soul — a marked contrast, for example, to the far more polished music of Motown. His hits are classic, of course, and will live as long as anyone cares about this music. But, if anyone would like to hear more contemporary music from the wicked one, I'd recommend checking out "It's Harder Now" — a typical Pickett double entendre — which came out in 1999 and earned a Grammy nomination.

Was Wilson Pickett a hard person to get along with? I've heard stories about him being cantankerous and causing scenes. True?

True. He always said he earned the epithet “wicked” after making a pass at a record company secretary, but he definitely had a temper and didn’t mind the occasional gun play either.

What were his recording sessions like? Did [record producer] Jerry Wexler tell him what to do?

Those sessions in Memphis and Muscle Shoals were extremely collaborative — Pickett himself, Wexler, engineer Tom Dowd and guitarist Steve Cropper all had a say, along with others.

I've always been a big fan of the Irish film "The Commitments." Wasn't Mr. Pickett the entertainer they were trying to play for to earn their big break?

Yes. Pickett embodied all of the passion and grittiness that American soul music represented for those musicians. In the real world, Pickett and the other soul greats had a large and enthusiastic audience for their music in Europe throughout their lives, and could tour there very profitably.

Did he write “In the Midnight Hour”?

Indeed, he did, with Steve Cropper, the guitarist for Booker T. and the MG's. Cropper had heard the phrase and Pickett had some music that seemed right for it. Understatement of the year.

Who were his musical influences?

Like so many African American artists of that time, Pickett's early influences were in the church and on the gospel scene.

A Disservice to the Disabled

I FOUND the Jan. 20 article “Disabled Riders Lash Out” very informative. But why is Washington resident Bobby Coward referred to as “wheelchair bound?” What’s wrong with saying, “Bobby Coward, who uses a wheelchair...?” The focus should have been on the person, not the assistive device that he uses. Please do a better job of reinforcing that focus.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Others may be telling you to cut your losses, but you feel certain that something big is around the corner. Is it the right time for such a risk?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You can learn a great deal which will hold you in good stead as the month continues. You'll get a glimpse of the future during evening.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may be a little too old-fashioned for some, but those who appreciate your outlook will reward you with much you find of value.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A little soul-searching at the right time goes a long way. Once you know the answers, you can share newfound wisdom with others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A negative trend mustn't be allowed to stop you in your endeavors. It's important that you maintain a positive outlook.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Avoid any kind of dilly-dallying; be focused on the task at hand, and willing to work on it throughout the day without distraction.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may well be confusing right with privilege. The one is yours by birth, the other must be earned -- and they're not interchangeable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You will enjoy the day far more after you come under the calming influence of a Cancer or Sagittarius native. Let yourself be swept away.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) As soon as you ask yourself if you're really on the right track, you'll get a sign that indicates clearly what changes, if any, you must make.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) It's never too late -- so don't give up before you've really given yourself the fullest chance to succeed. Keep going.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) It's time, once again, to get yourself moving more definitely toward a chosen goal. It's important for you to make a statement.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Memories abound, but they should in no way keep you from concentrating on the plans you're making for the future. Stay in touch.

THE GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY MEDICAL CENTER
WASHINGTON DC

If you are experiencing some of these symptoms, you may be suffering from Manic-Depression (Bipolar Disorder).

If you are between 18 and 65 years of age, have been feeling this way for at least 2 weeks, you may qualify to participate in a medication treatment research study.

Worry Worry

- Are you worried or anxious most of the time?
- Do others tell you that you worry needlessly or worry too much?
- Are you so agitated that you can't enjoy your life?
- Are you so on edge that your health is affected?
- Do you suffer from shortness of breath, palpitations, difficulty sleeping, excessive sweating, or abdominal distress?

If so, you may have Generalized Anxiety Disorder.

If you are between the ages of 18 and 65, you may qualify to participate in a research study in which you will receive investigational medication and study-related physical exams at no cost. This study is located near the Foggy Bottom Metro station and requires 9 visits over 12 weeks.
